"EL FUREIDIS."

This is the title of a new book by the author of "the Lamplighter," and is published by Messrs. Ticknor & Fields, of Boston. The scene is laid in Syria, and the authoress, as she says in her preface, invites "those who may be so inclined, to follow me in my imaginary experiences, trusting that there are some in whom I may be so fortunate as to awaken an interest in a land which has aroused my own enthusiasm, and that, pursuing with what patience they may, the route which I have trod, they may come at last to feel, like me, at home in "El Fureidis." We make a few extracts:-MOUNT LEBANON.

"Meredith had stood with entranced vision upon many of the glorious heights of Lebanon, but never had the circumstance and the We hour combined to impart such sublimity to the scene. Far as the eye could reach, in every direction, it commanded a panorama of mingled beauty and grandeur, from the yellow corn-fields and dusky olive-groves of the Eastern plain, to the clear blue waters of the Mediterranean, which terminated the Western view. Here stretched a long mountain line, the fertile sides of the nearer hills clothed with terraced groves and vineyards, and embosoming white villages in their sheltered nocks. Yonder might be seen distant and more rugged eraggs, bristling with precipies of tawny rock, seamed with dark brown veins, and clothed at intervals with heavy foliage of the fir and pine. Towering above all, the hoary Hermon reared its lofty crest, Chincha & Sombrero Islands. capped with snow, which glistened like silver in the light of the setting sun.

Far away against the horizon might be dimly discerned the graceful outline of lesser ridges, which, veiled in misty blue, seemed to melt into the very ether, and along the shores of the placid sea might be traced the undulating curves of the sandy coast, with the white walls and towers of Beyrout standing boldly out against their dark background of orchards, gardens and groves. If anything could have served to add dignity to such a scene, it was furnished by the solemn memorials of the past, which were scattered at the very feet of the beholder. On the mountain summit, thrown together in the wildest confusion, either by an earthquake or the mighty hand of some human destroyer, lay the ruins of an ancient temple, such as are frequent in these regions, and which, although their precise origin is unknown to the traveller, are in themselves impressive chroniclers of a once powerful race and age. the lofty porticoes, broken pilasters, and huge leveled blocks of stone, telling of the majestic hand which reared them-a hand only less mighty than that which hurled them down." A BEDOUIN HAREM.

The Bedonin harem is at once the storehouse, hitchen, bedroom, and nursery of the household. That of Zanadeen consisted of strips of black goat's hair cloth, stretched from a central pole to several similar supports, arranged so as to form a square. Around the central statt, huge jars of honey or dates, wheat-sacks, coffee-bags, and other family stores, were stacked in a pyramidal form. Close to this promiscuous heap, was placed a strip of carpet, which constituted the seat of honor .-The remaining space which the tent afforded, was devoted to culinary and other domestic uses. In one corner, a wrinkled hag, dressed in a long blue robe, and with a black handkerchief around her head, was leaning over a smoking caldron; near her were two young women, one of whom was pounding wheat in a copper mortar, and the other baking thin cakes upon a heated from pan. All three looked up eagerly at Hayilah as she entered, but none of them stopped their operations, or came forward to bid her welcome. The recendoul. The withered hag in the corner had formeranother. Her two sons, also, had once teen the AMERICAN HARVESTER. hope of Zanadeen, but one had been killed in a forray, one died on a desert march, and their mother had lived to be dethroned by a younger bride, and

The beauty of the present pride of the harem was already on the waner but she had fulness and dignity of person; her eyes were large and lustrous; her lips, punctured and stained with a blue dye, were compressed and haughty; her whole men was indicative of conscious power, and her bright-red keyfiyeh, her armlets and anklets of colored glass, and a heavy silver ring worn in her nose, suggested a love of savage finery.

Her reception of Havilah was a strange mingling of boldness, curiosity and awe. She unhesital ingly took her young visitor by the hand, drew her within the tent, and invited her to take a seat on the carpet, then, squatting down beside her, scrutinized her dress, her features, and her beha-

But impressed as the sheik's wife was by a loveliness and refinement which surpassed all her preconceived ideas, inquisitiveness soon got the better of veneration, and she commenced handling the material of Havilah's dress, searf, and shoes, at the same time assailing her with a volley of questions. Havilah submitted to her hostess's inspec-tion with good-humor, and patiently answered all her queries; but it was something of a relief, that the head of the establishment was frequently interrupted, and summoned from her inquisitorial post, to superintend the cooking department, and not calculated to convey a very flattering idea of her temper or character. Her voice was loud, her raise and lower the finger-bar to pass obstructions, FARMING IMPLEMENTS, manners and language overbearing and peremptory. Whether portioning out stores, directing her handmaidens, or making occasional assaults upon her young children, two little brothers of Abdoul, who were playing about the tent, she evinced a boxes, and is furnished with double trees, neck pride and s verity which made her presence less | yoke and extras complete. welcome each time that she returned to her place

Preparations for supper, meanwhile, went rapidly forward. The aroma of coffee began to mingle with the almost suffocating smoke which filled the tent. The steam from the caldren was savory with the herbs which were boiling among the stew. The thin cakes were baked crisp and brown. At length the huge joints of mutton were ladled out, and, floating in a sea of rice, were carried forth to be served to the sheik and his guests, Havilah having declined everything save coffee, bread and dates, which were brought her by the old woman. Comparative quiet and order now ensued in the harem, the smoke gradually subsided, the cooking-utensils were put out of sight. The sun had gone down, and, as the moon rose late, there was no light in the camp save that which proceeded | Having greatly increased their facilities for manfrom watch-fires burning in front of the semi-circle of tents. The barem stood in the rear of the sheik's larger dwelling, and was therefore in deep shadow. Leaning against the camel-forniture, which had been thrown over the bales and bags, in the centre of the apartment, Havilah listened to the deep nasal din of Arab talk and argument going forward in the camp, a din which she right ly foresaw would continue far into the night .-Immediately around her, however, a refreshing stillness prevailed. The domineering principal had drawn off her children, and herself retreated to a partitioned corner of the sheik's tent; the young serving-women, also, had disappeared .-Geita, vexed at the importunities of the Arab girls, had long since mat ifested her disgust at the whole establishment, by curling herself up in a corner,

EXCELSIOR NO. 1 PERUVIAN GUANO SOLUBLE PHOSPHATE,

Commonly known as EXCELSIOR DEBURG, ONTAINING Ammonia, 6 per ct.; Phosphates 57 per cent., composed of 700 pounds of No. 1 PERUVIAN GUANO, and 1300 pounds of SO-LUBLE PHOSPHATE OF LIME, Potash, Soda, and Magnesia, forming the most concentrated and durable FERTILIZER ever offered to the Farmer, combining all the stimulating properties of Peruvian Guano, and the durable fertilizing properties of Ground Bones-supplying an abundance of Ammonia for any crop and all soils, and in a perfectly fixed condition-not volatile, and passing off with the first crop as with Peruvian and other Ammoniacal Guanos, but stimulating the crop to which it is applied, and all succeeding ones, giving to poor, worn out and unproductive soils, new life and vigor.

It furnishes to the soil Soluble Phosphate of Lime, (Bones dissolved in Sulphuric acid) in perfectly available form, ready food for the plant at once; a fact of great importance to the Farmer; as the immediate action and efficacy of all ma-nures, depends entirely upon the solubility of their Phosphates. Bones are alone used in the manufacture of this article, avoiding altogether the use of the so-called Phosphatic Guanos, a considerable portion of whose Phosphates are of Iron and Alumnica, which are utterly valueless to the

The EXCELSIOR also supplies to the soil, Potash, Soda, and Magnesia, which are extracted from it in the growth of all plants; and must be returned, or the soil will become impoverished and exhausted, notwithstanding the application of Guano and other Manures deficient in Alkalies. This article has been tested for several years past with Peruvian and other Guanos, and now ranks with those who have used it, as a first class Manure for any crop common to this region. Numerous certificates to that effect furnished on ap-

Every package is warranted to be uniform in quality, and to contain by analysis, the standard of fertilizing properties. Farmers should see that every package bears in red letters the name of J. J. & F. Turner, under the inspection-none other genuine. Price $47 per 2000 pounds. For sale in any quantity, by JAMES C. NEVETT,
